RELIGION, MORALS AND PHILOSOPHY. Rev. C. C. BROWN, Editor.

UNTIL THE DAYBREAK. When will the day bring its pleasure? When will the night bring its rest?

Reaper and gleaner and thresher Peer towards the east and west-The Sower He knoweth, and He knoweth Meteors flash forth and expire.

Northern lights kindle and pale; These are the days of desire, Of eyes looking upward that fail; Vanishing days as a finishing tale. Bows down the crop in its glory

Ten-fold, fifty-fold, hundred-fold; The millet is ripened and hoary, The wheat ears are ripened to gold; Why keep us waiting in dimness and cold?

The Lord of the harvest, He knoweth Who knoweth the first and the last; The Sower who patiently soweth, He scanneth the present and past; He saith, "What thou hast, what remaineth, hold fast." Yes, Lord, o'er Tay toil-wearied weepers The storm-clouds hang muttering and frown; | felt obliged to make a carriage to fit it, On threshers and gleaners and reapers,

O Lord of the harvest, look down; Oh for the harvest, the shout and the crown! "Not so," saith the Lord of the reapers,

The Lord of the first and the last; "O my toilers, my weary, my weepers, What ye have, what remaineth, hold fast, Hide in My heart till the vengeance be past."

"I do not understand you," said a voice, which had thus far been silent, "I was with him in his last moments, and I thought he died rich." "You are mistaken; his estate amounts to nothing at all." "But surely he left a good name, and a legacy of noble deeds, and a holy example, and lessons of patience in suffering, of hope in adversity. of heavenly confidence, when no sunbeams fell upon his path." "Then he died rich," was the emphatic declaration, "richer than the millionaire who went to his long home the same day, miserable in all but his gold." Any grasping, selfish man with a moderate share of brain may gather money, and learn the art of keeping it; but not one in a hundred can conquer bravely in the battle of life as he did, and step forth from the ranks of men a

The Power of the Cross. Wonders of power are being performed in our own experience every day of the week, entirely through the Cross. I appeal to you who are truly converted, were you converted through the wisdom tion guaranteed. of man? I appeal to you that are kept from sinning, are you led towards holiness by the power of clocution, of rhetoric, or of logic? I appeal to you who are despairing, are you ever revived by musical words or rythmical sentences? What is your life, my brethren, but the Cross? Whence comes the bread of your soul, but from the Cross? What is your joy but the Cross? What is FILES, CIRCULAR SAWS, SAW GUMyour delight, what is your heaven, but the Blessed One, once crucified for you. who ever liveth to make intercession for you? Cling to the Cress, then. When you hear men say, "I have watched those who profess so much religion, and I don't see that they are any better than those who do not make such a high profession," depend upon it they have got some Country Produce of all Kinds Bought smoke in their eyes, and those whose eyes are full of smoke cannot see very clearly. Denominational smoke is about the most blinding smoke we know of, and prevents the gospel from taking hold of the masses more than any other agency. Were we to sit down by our neighbor's fire occasionally, instead of looking down his chimney we should see many good points in his character that smoke will surely obscure .- Olice Branch.

Coffee deinkers should read the advertisement in another column headed Good Coffee.

A Father's Advice to a Bride. Said a young husband, whose busiiess speculations were unsuccessful, "My wife's silver tea set the bridal gift of a rich uncle, doomed me to fivancial ruin. It involved a hundred unexpected expenses, which, in trying to meet, have made me the bankrupt I am." His is the experience of many others, who, less wise, do not know what is the goblin of the house working its destruction. A sagacious father of great wealth exceedingly mortified his daughter by ordering it to be printed on her wedding cards: "No presents except those adapted to an income of £200." Said he: "You must not expect to begin life in the style I am able by many years to indulge, and I know of nothing which will tempt you to try more than the well intentioned but pernicious gifts of rich friends."

Such advice is timely. If other parents would follow the same plan many young men would be spared years of incessant toil and anxiety; they would not find themselves on the downward road because their wives had worn all their salary or expended it on appointments of the house. The fate of the poor man who found a linch-pin and is the fate of the husband who finds his bride in possession of gold and silver valuables, and no large income to support the owner's gold and silver in
